Multi-Agency Collaboration
Unveils Online Survey of LA’s Creative Community on August 15, 2011 to Determine Affordable Space Needs for Area Artists, Arts-Related Businesses, and Others

Los Angeles - The City of Los Angeles Department of Cultural Affairs (DCA) has partnered with Bringing Back Broadway, the Community Redevelopment Agency of the City of L.A., the City Planning Department’s Urban Design Studio, the Local Initiatives Support Corporation (LISC), California Institute of the Arts (CalArts), the Actors Fund/Actors Fund Housing Development Corporation, and Artspace Projects, to explore new affordable, mixed-use creative facilities in Downtown Los Angeles.

DCA was recently awarded $100,000 in federal funding from the National Endowment for the Arts Mayors’ Institute on City Design 25th Anniversary Initiative. Funding is being used for planning and pre-development of the Broadway Arts Center (BAC), envisioned as a mixed-use affordable artists’ housing, performance/exhibition space, educational facility, and creative commercial center, located in the Historic Broadway Theater District in downtown Los Angeles. The goal is to utilize the arts to promote a safe and vibrant community, create jobs, provide opportunities for artists, and further enhance community development.

Two surveys that will help the team understand the space needs of the creative community in the Los Angeles region are underway. One survey is for individuals, and the other survey is for organizations and businesses. The agencies affiliated with this project will be holding a Survey Workshop and Kick-Off Event on August 15, and will provide an opportunity for those in the creative fields to learn more about this important initiative.
