Los Angeles – The City of Los Angeles announced today that it will receive the Arts & Sciences Cities of Distinction Award from the Phi Beta Kappa Society in recognition of the quality, depth, range and vibrancy of its community engagement with the arts and sciences. Danielle Brazell, General Manager of the City of Los Angeles Department of Cultural Affairs (DCA), will accept the award on the city’s behalf during a ceremony at the Los Angeles Theatre Center on October 17, 2017.

“Los Angeles is the creative capital of the world, so culture isn’t an afterthought for us – it’s part of who we are, and it’s essential to the health and happiness of our people,” said Mayor Eric Garcetti. “Art has the extraordinary power to transform perceptions, attitudes, and behaviors, especially when it lives in places that are accessible to everyone.”

The event acknowledges the outstanding contributions of the city’s Department of Cultural Affairs to this municipal effort. “A city’s cultural vibrancy doesn’t just happen. It takes careful planning, financial support, and public commitment to its importance,” says Phi Beta Kappa Secretary/CEO Frederick M. Lawrence. “We applaud DCA not only for its cutting-edge programs that appeal to residents and visitors alike, but also for its equitable grants program, accessible public programs, and deep commitment to providing cultural opportunities for all.”

“We are so appreciative of this award recognizing that creativity is the lifeblood of LA. DCA honors and celebrates our city’s cultural and artistic diversity,” said DCA General Manager Danielle Brazell. “We are committed to supporting, showcasing, and advocating for the arts and the artists contributing both to the economy in LA and the vitality of LA.”
