

Frank Lloyd Wright's Hollyhock House Designated a UNESCO World Heritage Site | KCET

---

 kcet.org/shows/artbound/frank-lloyd-wrights-hollyhock-house-designated-a-unesco-world-heritage-site

July 31,
2019

Title

---

Frank Lloyd Wright's Hollyhock House Designated a UNESCO World Heritage Site

---

City News Service

City News Service is an independent wire service that serves Los Angeles area news outlets. Posts identifying them in a byline means KCET-TV has used their story, either in full or close to full.

LOS ANGELES (CNS) - City Councilman Mitch O'Farrell led a celebration today to mark the addition of Hollyhock House, an east Hollywood landmark designed by famed architect Frank Lloyd Wright, to the list of UNESCO World Heritage Sites.

The city-owned Hollyhock House, located within Barnsdall Art Park, is the first UNESCO site in Los Angeles and the third such site in the state of California.

Hollyhock House UNESCO designation event

"This designation as a UNESCO World Heritage site underscores the significance of Los Angeles' rich history of modern architecture," O'Farrell said. "Frank Lloyd Wright's Hollyhock House is a beloved masterpiece locally and now a treasure worldwide. The inscription of this nomination marks the first modern architectural cultural property designation not only in California, but the United States."

According to the Barnsdall Art Park website, Hollyhock House was built between 1919 and 1921 as the personal residence of oil heiress Aline Barnsdall, who asked the architect to incorporate her favorite flower -- the hollyhock — into the design. The house — Wright's first Los Angeles commission — was a harbinger of California Modernism architecture, according to the website.

Get a rare glimpse of Frank Lloyd Wright's Hollyhock House in this walkthrough.

More About Frank Lloyd Wright

---

Learn more about Frank Lloyd Wright, the tragedy in his life and the consequent development of the textile block houses, including the Hollyhock house on "Artbound" S9 E1: That Far Corner - Frank Lloyd Wright in Los Angeles.

Jeffrey Herr, a curator at Hollyhock House, said the designation to the UNESCO list was a 14-year effort among various city, state and federal agencies, as well as the Frank Lloyd Wright Building Conservancy.

"This is a wonderful moment. It is a unique moment because it's a moment that will have consequences far beyond our lifetimes," Herr said, as he thanked all the volunteers who facilitate the thousands of visitors to the house each year.

O'Farrell also said more improvements will start on Residence A, a separate structure within the 11 1/2-acre Barnsdall Art Park, which also houses the Los Angeles Municipal Art Gallery, the Junior Arts Center and adult art programs, and the Barnsdall Gallery Theatre, a low-cost venue for the performing arts.

Barnsdall gave the acreage to the city of Los Angeles in 1927 and stipulated that the site must "forever remain a public park... for the enjoyment of the community in general [and that] no buildings be erected except for art purposes." Los Angeles' Department of Cultural Affairs operates the cultural and artistic programs at Barnsdall Park, while the grounds are maintained by the Department of Recreation and Parks.

Hollyhock House | Still from "Artbound" S9 E1: That Far Corner - Frank Lloyd Wright in Los Angeles

DCA General Manager Danielle Brazell, Councilman Mitch O'Farrell and Council District 13 staff at the Hollyhock UNESCO event

Tom LaBonge and Mayor Eric Garcetti at the Hollyhock House UNESCO event

Connect with KCET

Artbound's newsletter showcases a hand-picked selection of our latest articles and documentaries featuring diverse arts and culture stories ranging from hidden histories and fine artists to street art and guerilla theater.

---

Detail of the Hollyhock House | Still from "Artbound" S9 E1: That Far Corner - Frank Lloyd Wright in Los Angeles

About the Author

City News Service

City News Service is an independent wire service that serves Los Angeles area news outlets. Posts identifying them in a byline means KCET-TV has used their story, either in full or close to full.